The Open Access Success Stories .....
Why

• Open access - the free, immediate, online access to the results of scholarly research – can transform scholarship and its impact.
• Through compelling stories from across Europe, across stakeholders and across disciplines, this project shows that transformation in action.
What are these stories

• More than 30 stories
• From more than a dozen European countries
• Covering a wide range of stakeholders
• Over a wide range of disciplines and themes
• From long-established journals and scholars to new projects and early career researchers Stakeholders include

- Researchers
- Librarians
- Journal Editors
- Publishers
- Repository managers
- Small and Medium sized Enterprises

Germany: Journal: Connotations

Slowly but surely: a 15-year-long step-by-step move to open access sees submissions soar

http://www.connotations.uni-tuebingen.de

What is it?

Connotations is a 20-year-old international journal about English literature, based in Germany. It started out as a print journal and took the first steps in electronic publishing in 1996 when it began to offer a selection of articles and discussions free of charge online. The journal became fully open access in 2010 and it has recently completed a three-year process of putting all its back issues online.

15 year long move to OA saw submissions soar

Since moving to OA in 2010:
• Submissions up 20-25%, subject range broader
• Links from related websites up

“We have noticed that since the complete archive has gone online, we regularly see the journal accessed from more than 50 countries which is a lot for such a specialised journal. Articles are accessed in many countries in Africa and Asia where there has never been a subscription of the printed journal.”
Matthias Bauer, editor, Connotations
DeGruyter and TOPOI

an innovative partnership to pilot open access monograph publishing

Experiment trialling combining open access with the support of professional publishers in the publication of current research

"I have never believed our business to be anything other than service. That's what we do. I never had the idea that the publisher owns the content and somebody buys content from them – that is simply not true."

Sven Fund, managing director, de Gruyter
Richard Clapp – Environmental Health

Overcoming censorship to publish publicly important research

2006 paper on mortality rates among IBM workers a two-year-long battle for the Boston University professor of public health to publish his own work, a battle which encompassed a full editorial boycott of an Elsevier journal, media spotlight on right-to-publish issues, and court cases in California and New York State.
He published it in an OA journal.
